

While the Raven 500 may evoke memories of the 1970s Comanche 260C from Piper, its low parts count makes building simpler, and the performance of the finished airplane far exceeds that of the original in speed, payload and range.

